Abstract

Conducting investment activities in the capital market is not a new thing for the people of Indonesia. This aims to obtain a greater return than investment in the banking world. The public can invest in go public companies which have been grouped into 9 company sectors. This company sector is a combination of companies that have the same type of business. One way to assess sectoral stock price movements is through the stock price index. The stock price index is an indicator number in viewing the average price of several shares of companies going public.
